3. Open Response Questions:

3.1) What do you like most about the course and instructor?

- Explanations are clear
- Lab was unnecessary. The most useful activities in lab were going over homework assignments and tests, but if I actually wanted to review an assignment or test, I would alternatively go to Keke's office hours for extra credit. This and the fact that Keke frequently cancelled lab made it feel like a waste of time.
- She is very helpful and very much willing to help whenever possible. She is also engaged and enthusiastic about the material, which helps a lot.
- When lab took place the instructor would go over the homework and asked the students if they had any questions on it which was helpful.

3.2) What could the instructor do to improve the course, if anything?

- Create fun activities that reinforce the concepts we learn in class to make it worthwhile to go to lab. The activity with marbles and probability wasn't helpful. Going over homework and tests is unnecessary when we have ample time in Keke's office hours. Either create interactive lesson plans or remove lab altogether.
- Give more time for hw or provide hw when office hours are available
- Lab was cancelled for most of the semester which was disappointing because I would look forward to going to ask questions about something that I did not understand either in lecture or in the homework. In the beginning of the semester, lab was described as place where we could ask such questions. I think not cancelling lab so often would help and my classmates to succeed in this course.
- No thing much, she is really good.
