3.2) What could the instructor do to improve the course, if anything?

- A thing that the instructor could do to improve the course is to be more confident. Do not be so timid in what you do. You have more knowledge about psychology than any of the students taking the introduction course of psychology. Being more confident will increase the amount of respect you will likely receive from the students. But do not go to extreme. Your timidity that is not an unhealthy amount, allows you to be more approachable.
- Be around more.
- Be more involved

- Did not know this TA at all. Was never around.
- Everything is fine the way it is.
- Her speaking ability. In some cases i had trouble hearing what she said.
- I cannot give clear input on this instructor due to the fact that I never really went to office hours for any of them.
- I don't think that she needs to improve in anything.
- I have no comment
- I only saw her on Midterms so idk
- I think the instructor could be more helpful by being present within the class, explaining ideas of psychology in which she specializes in.

Also to announce any available SONA experiments and extra office hours.

- I would have to say maybe adding an extra day for the class a week and making the lecture a bit shorter would be ideal. Its difficult to sit down two hours and pay attention without any distractions.
- Just keep on giving the review sessions and think of maybe giving them during the actual psychology lecture and not after the class in done.
- Make the course a little more enjoyable. Offer help to students more often
- More review sections.
